Course Description

This graduate seminar aims to provide a comprehensive introduction to the field of historical sociology. It will help the students to critically analyze the theoretical content and methodological aspects of some of the key works of the literature. This skill will enable them to design and carry out historical sociological research projects of their own.

Course Requirements

Attendance and Participation: Unless you have a legitimate excuse, you are expected to attend all classes. If there is an extenuating situation that prevents you from coming to class, please inform me in advance. If you miss more than two classes without a legitimate excuse, the possibility of you successfully finishing this class would significantly decrease. The course will primarily run in seminar format. Each student is expected to actively participate in class discussions.

Presentation: Each student is required to make a presentation (20 minutes maximum) on one of the assigned course materials.

Position papers: Each student is required to write a total of four position papers (Times New Roman, 12-font, 4 double-spaced pages maximum, Word – not PDF– document) on the assigned texts of her/his own choosing. Students are required to submit a position paper on the reading materials that they are assigned to present in class. Position papers should be sent to the instructor via email by Tuesday(s) at 8 am the latest (in order to give the instructor enough time to review them before the seminar meeting). Late submissions will not be accepted.

Final assignment: You need to submit two (separate) reviews of English-language academic books (having strong historical or historical sociological content) that have been published in the last two years to two (different) academic journals. A typical book review is between 1000 and 2000 words in length but each journal has its own rule. You need to submit the list of two books and two journals and provide information about the book review space limits of the selected journals to the instructor via email by December 4. Late proposals will be responded but will not be graded (i.e., their grade will be zero). The instructor may immediately approve the list or may ask certain changes before approval. The deadline for the submission of all books reviews to the instructor is January 12, 2021. Late submissions will not be accepted/graded.

The instructor will grade the final assignment and give feedback for the revision of the book reviews (if necessary) to each student by January 16. In order to receive the formal final grade, each student should submit both of her/his book reviews to journals and forward the submission confirmation email received from the journal to the instructor by January 23, 2021. Those who do not submit this information to the instructor will not receive a final paper grade (i.e., their final paper grade will be zero).

University Academic Regulations and the Regulations for Student Disciplinary Matters clearly define the policy and the disciplinary action to be taken in case of academic dishonesty. Failure in academic integrity may lead to suspension and expulsion from the University. Cheating includes, but is not limited to, copying from a classmate or providing answers or information, either written or oral, to others. Plagiarism is borrowing or using someone else's writing or ideas without giving written acknowledgment to the author.
